Tension Erupts in Kashipur Over Sijimali Mining Road Project; Police Injured, Section 144 Imposed

Rayagada : Tension escalated in the Kashipur block of Rayagada district following a violent clash between police and local protesters over the proposed road construction to the Sijimali mining area. Despite having government approval for mining operations, the project has been facing strong resistance from local communities for a long time.

The dispute centers around the construction of a road from Shagabari to the Tijimali mining zone by Vedanta Limited. Locals have been opposing the project, staging protests, road blockades, and sit-ins, alleging threats to their land, environment, and livelihood.

In an effort to bring the situation under control,

Rayagada District Collector Ashutosh Kulkarni visited the area and held discussions with the agitating villagers. However, the protesters remained firm in their opposition and refused to accept the administration's assurances.

The situation took a violent turn on Monday night when agitated locals allegedly attacked police personnel with stones and sharp weapons. Several officers, including SDPO Gaur Hari Sahu, Kashipur IIC Deba Mallik, and Andirakanch IIC, along with more than 30 police personnel, sustained injuries in the attack.

Following the incident, the administration has imposed Section 144 in the area to maintain law and order and prevent further escalation. Security has been tightened, and additional police forces have been deployed in the sensitive zones.

The standoff between the police and protesters continues, with the region remaining tense. Sources indicate that negotiations may resume to find a peaceful resolution, but no breakthrough has been achieved so far.

Local residents have reiterated their opposition to the road construction, demanding that their concerns be addressed before any further development work proceeds. Meanwhile, officials have assured that all steps will be taken to restore normalcy and ensure safety in the area.

Rayagada Celebrates "Barnabodha Day" to Promote Odia Language and Early Education

Rayagada : "Barnabodha Day" was observed across Rayagada district on Tuesday under the initiative of the district administration, aiming to promote the Odia language and strengthen foundational learning among young students.

The celebration was held at Gandhi Nagar and Indira Nagar Upper Primary Schools, where several dignitaries participated in the program. Among those present were District Culture Officer Sushmita Bauri, Additional Block Development Officer (ABDO) Kalu Charan Nayak, Gram Panchayat Development Officer Smruti Rekha Nayak, senior teacher Nilanchal Mishra, and headmasters Pratap Chandra Bataria and Pramila Panda.

On this occasion, "Chhabila Barnabodha" books were distributed to pre-school, Class I, and Class II students, while children of Classes III and IV received storybooks to encourage reading habits. Teachers of the respective schools actively supported the event and ensured smooth conduct of the event.

As per the directive of the Rayagada District Collector (Letter No. 949 dated March 30, 2026), "Odia Paksha" is being celebrated across the district starting from Odisha Day. In line with this, Barnabodha books along with sweets were distributed among children by the Panchayat

Samiti, Rayagada.

Students were also sensitized about the importance of Barnabodha in preserving Odia language and literature. The event witnessed enthusiastic participation from children, who recited poems, sang songs, and narrated stories, captivating the audience.

Similar programs were organized at various schools across the block, where Barnabodha books were distributed and the day was celebrated at the grassroots level.

"Barnabodha," known for its simple poems, short stories, and lessons on Odia alphabets and conjunct letters, is considered a cornerstone of Odia language and culture. It plays a vital role in strengthening language skills and ensuring proper pronunciation and spelling from the early stages of education.

District Culture Officer Sushmita Bauri highlighted that the Department of Odia Language, Literature & Culture and the Odia Language Institution are giving special importance to Barnabodha as a tool for preserving linguistic heritage.

ABDO Kalu Charan Nayak emphasized that introducing Barnabodha at the beginning of school education will significantly enhance children's language development and improve spelling accuracy.

RTI Row in ITDA Gunupur: Allegations of Tender Irregularities and "Non-Payment" Rejection Spark Controversy

Rayagada : A major controversy has surfaced in ITDA Gunupur over alleged irregularities in the tender process and denial of information under the Right to Information (RTI) Act. Two Assistant Executive Engineers—Shambhu Charan Mundari and Hare Krishna Panda—have come under suspicion following serious allegations raised by an applicant.

According to reports, the applicant had filed an RTI application on January 27, 2026, seeking detailed information regarding alleged misuse of reservation quotas (SC and physically challenged categories) in a government tender process. The complaint also pointed to manipulation of tender outcomes to benefit specific parties, proxy bidding practices, and discrepancies between actual beneficiaries and registered bidders.

It has further been alleged that the licensed bidder involved did not personally sign the bidding documents, and their identity may have been misused to avail reservation benefits. Questions were also raised about submission of false information and financial inconsistencies in the tender process. Additionally, concerns were expressed over the bidder's financial capability, as the family was reportedly availing benefits under the Right to Education (RTE) scheme meant for economically weaker sections.

To verify these allegations, the applicant sought information through RTI and was instructed via official letters (No. 597 and 598 dated March 27, 2026) to deposit ₹2,280 as the required fee. Accordingly, the applicant remitted ₹2,415 through an Indian Postal Order (IPO) on March 10, 2026, addressed to the ITDA authorities.

However, despite receiving the fee, the department allegedly returned the acknowledgment letter on March 23 citing "insufficient address." Subsequently, on March 25, 2026 (Letter No. 769), the RTI application was rejected via email on the grounds of "non-payment," triggering serious questions over the conduct of the officials.

The sequence of events has raised suspicion of deliberate suppression of information and misuse of official authority. While Shambhu Charan Mundari has reportedly been transferred, attempts to contact Hare Krishna Panda yielded no response.

Reacting strongly to the issue, Jitu Jakshika, State Coordinator of the Bahujan Samaj Party (BSP), criticized the alleged misuse of rights meant for Scheduled Castes and Tribes in a tribal-dominated district like Rayagada. He stated that he would personally investigate the matter and demand suspension of the responsible officials from the departmental secretary.

The applicant has asserted that despite complying with all RTI provisions and depositing the required fee, the denial of information amounts to violation of legal rights, abuse of power, and breach of service conduct rules. He has confirmed that a case has already been filed before the Hon'ble High Court against the concerned officials.

Furthermore, the applicant indicated plans to file another case seeking investigation into the tender process, alleged violations of PWD norms, undue benefits to private contractors, and possible suspension of the tender proceedings. Intellectuals and local observers have termed the incident as a serious case of professional misconduct by government officials. Meanwhile, demands for a high-level inquiry into the matter are gaining momentum.

Toxic Water in the Daya River, Fish Deaths and Risk of Disease Spread

Puri : The water of the Daya River in the district has now become toxic. Due to pollution, a large number of fish are dying. There is also a growing fear of a diarrhea outbreak in the area, which has left local residents worried.

Water hyacinth is spreading rapidly in the river, and polluted water from the Gangua drain is mixing into it. Garbage, sewage, and silt have reduced the oxygen levels in the water, leading to the death of fish. Dead fish of several species—such as shrimp, kantia, kalabaichi, kau, sarana balia, kerandi, and phali—are being seen floating in the river.

Experts warn that if the condition of the water continues like this, fish eggs will also be destroyed and their reproduction will stop. This will seriously impact the livelihood of fishermen. The problem has persisted for the past 4-5 years, but no solution has been found.

Local residents have repeatedly complained to the administration and the government, but no concrete action has been taken so far. People are demanding that instead of directly releasing dirty water from the Gangua drain into the river, a treatment plant should be set up.

Due to polluted water, cases of skin diseases and other illnesses are increasing among people. Diarrhea outbreaks are occurring frequently, especially in the Kanas area. Residents have urged the district administration to take immediate action on this serious issue.

According to DIG Mishra, the team included eight Additional Superintendents of Police (Add SPs), 17 officers of Deputy Superintendent of Police (DSP) rank, 25 Inspectors, and 67 Sub-Inspectors and Assistant Sub-Inspectors.

Police teams carried out searches at houses and premises suspected to be linked to cattle smuggling networks, with the aim of uncovering financial records, transportation links, and other evidence associated with the illegal trade. During the raids, police recovered substantial amounts of cash and valuables believed to have been generated through illegal cattle smuggling activities.

“So far, we have raided 32 locations and seized over ₹50 lakh in cash. This is a preliminary figure, as counting is still ongoing at some locations,” DIG Mishra stated.

Trump's Eruption

RESTRAINT and moderation are certainly not the strong suits of US President Donald Trump. In the thick of the US-Israel war against Iran, he has vented his growing frustration in an expletive-laden social media post. Peppered with profanity and religious references, Trump's warning to Tehran over the Strait of Hormuz is nothing but an impulsive provocation. Such language is not merely undignified; it is a recipe for disaster. His bluster will only embolden Iran to retaliate more fiercely rather than push it towards the negotiating table.

The US President is giving the impression that the ongoing war is a throwback to the medieval Crusades, which pitted Christians against Muslims for centuries. Playing the religious card to the hilt, he has described the rescue of an American airman in Iran as an "Easter miracle". The invocation of a sacred day in Christianity that symbolises resurrection and hope is a blatant attempt to cast the military operation in moral and divine terms. Such rhetoric risks transforming a complex geopolitical conflict into a simplistic narrative of righteousness. Democratic lawmakers have called for a probe to ascertain whether religious beliefs are being used to justify military actions. Their warning is rooted in a foundational democratic principle: the separation of the Church and the State. Military decisions, they argue, must be guided by law, strategy and accountability — not by invoking God or biblical prophecies.

Trump's reckless threats can endanger the lives of US defence personnel in West Asia and also derail backchannel diplomatic efforts. Being the most powerful leader in the world, he must realise that his words can cause irreparable damage. Strong leadership demands responsibility as well as clarity. His bid to weaponise faith reeks of sheer desperation; it's a belated admission that he has bitten off much more than he can chew.

Pharma Impact

THE West Asia conflict has stung pharmaceutical hubs in Himachal Pradesh and Haryana. These regions, which power a significant share of India's drug manufacturing, particularly through MSMEs, are grappling with a sudden and severe disruption in the supply of key raw materials. At the heart of the crisis lies the sharp escalation in prices of active pharmaceutical ingredients (APIs), solvents and petrochemical derivatives. Many of these inputs are either sourced from or routed through West Asia. With shipping routes under strain and energy prices volatile, costs have surged by as much as 30 per cent in some segments. Packaging materials, often petroleum-based, have also become costlier, squeezing already thin margins.

But the impact is not confined to factory balance sheets. As highlighted in concerns over migrant vulnerabilities, disruptions in essential supplies like fuel and small LPG cylinders have already begun to affect daily life and worker stability. For pharma units that rely heavily on migrant labour, any such insecurity can translate into workforce disruptions, lower productivity and, in some cases, reverse migration. The industry's resilience is thus tied not only to supply chains but also to the well-being and confidence of its labour force. For Himachal's Baddi-Barotiwala-Nalagarh belt and Haryana's pharma clusters, the fallout is twofold. Production costs have spiked, forcing smaller manufacturers to cut output or absorb losses, while export competitiveness has weakened amid rising logistics costs and delays.

The crisis exposes the vulnerability of India's dependence on imported intermediates and fragile global supply chains. While recent duty relaxations on critical inputs offer temporary relief, deeper reforms, such as diversified sourcing, domestic API capacity and social protections for migrant workers, are imperative. A distant war is testing both India's medicine supply and the stability of those who produce it.

Will Balen heal the wounds of India?

Dr Vijay Darda

Sujata Shah Sejkan, sister of Nepal's new Prime Minister Balen Shah, lives in Bengaluru, India. In an interview with an international news agency immediately after Balen's landslide victory, she remarked that the bonds between India and Nepal are centuries old and no one can embitter them. This is the moment to write a new chapter in India-Nepal relations. If India can fulfil Balen's expectations through respectful cooperation, warmth can be restored in the relationship. The initiative, however, must come from India.

She suggested that recent frictions were merely a temporary phase and expressed optimism for the future. Furthermore, she voiced her conviction that bilateral relations would only truly improve once Balen Shah became Prime Minister.

Sujata's wish has been granted. At just 35, rapper-singer

Balen Shah has assumed the office of Prime Minister. Can we now hope that Balen will attempt to heal the deep wounds inflicted by the turbulent storms in India-Nepal relations over the last decade and a half? Will he succeed in such an attempt? Does he sincerely wish for the relations to be the same as they were before the rise of the Communist Party? What kind of relationship will he maintain with China? Strategically and diplomatically, Nepal remains a vital nation for global superpowers. As a result, many such questions are being raised, in Nepal as well as in other neighbouring countries. However, the people of Nepal have placed immense trust in him. Since 2008, the country has seen a number of coalition governments, but now the people have brought Balen's Rastriya Swatantra Party to power with a significant majority. In short, Balen holds the mandate. He possesses the power to reshape Nepal's destiny.

Immediately after assuming the office of Prime Minister, Balen Shah demonstrated his resolve during his very first cabinet meeting. The Gen Z movement that propelled him to power saw many young lives lost to government gunfire. A commission, headed by Gauri Bahadur Karki, was established to investigate these incidents, and it subsequently submitted its report to the interim government led by Sushila Karki. Balen has now ordered immediate action based on the commission's recommendations. Following this directive, former Prime Minister and Nepal Communist Party leader KP Sharma Oli, along with former home minister Ramesh Lekhak, were arrested. Oli is a leader known for aligning closely with China, both during and after his tenure; it is often said that the strikingly beautiful Chinese ambassador Hou Yanqi held significant influence over Oli.

Ramesh Lekhak was also seen as a promoter of the Chinese agenda. The arrest of Oli and Lekhak serves as a stern message to Beijing: China should not attempt to turn Nepal into a colony under the guise of leftist solidarity. While China has yet to offer an official reaction, it is undoubtedly monitoring these developments closely. Notably, Balen has sidelined Chinese interests earlier too. During KP Sharma Oli's premiership, the foundation stone was laid for the Nepal-China Friendship Industrial Park in the Jhapa parliamentary constituency. However, Balen pointedly removed this project, a key component of China's Belt and Road Initiative (BRI), from his election manifesto. These signals suggest that Balen has no intention of operating under China's shadow.

Does this, then, signal a positive turn for India? To a large extent, yes, but India must not assume that distancing itself from China means it will simply embrace India. Two examples of his past conduct warrant attention. As the mayor of Kathmandu, he had banned the film Adipurush because it depicted Sita as the daughter of India, whereas her birthplace, Janakpur, lies in Nepal. Furthermore, when KP Sharma Oli released a controversial map claiming parts of the Indian state of Uttarakhand as Nepalese territory, Balen not only supported the move but prominently displayed the map in the mayor's office. We must accept that Balen Shah will prioritise actions that fortify his brand of Nepalese nationalism. He will avoid any move that alienates Nepal's youth, while keeping a sharp eye on Nepal's strategic interests.

Nepal is landlocked, sharing a 1,250-kilometre border with India and a 1,414-kilometre border with China. However, the Chinese border consists of high mountains and icy peaks; trade with India is inherently more feasible than with China. Beyond logistics, there is the matter of cultural affinity. Although Balen rarely addresses it explicitly, he is a Madhesi, a group of Indian origin. In contrast, Nepal shares no such deep-rooted social or cultural ties with China. I believe Balen will certainly look towards India with hope. If the Indian government can meet this expectation through respectful cooperation, it will not only heal old wounds but also usher in a fresh breeze of warmth in bilateral ties. This is a new opportunity for both nations to rebuild their relationship. Let us hope all goes well!

Beyond Fluency: Rethinking Spoken English Education

Dr Vijay Garg

Teaching a language requires an understanding of how learners acquire language, how errors can be addressed, and how communicative competence can be developed.

A classroom full of learners stands with their hands over their hearts, repeating in unison: "From today, I will speak only in English. I can speak in English." The exercise resembles a pledge — solemn, collective, and hopeful. For many, it marks the start of a journey toward confidence and self-improvement. Yet, one cannot help but wonder: can fluency in a language truly be achieved through such declarations?

This scene is not unusual. With the onset of the vacation season, several spoken English centres appear across towns and cities, offering attractive packages and persuasive promises. Advertisements assure learners that fluency can be attained within two to three months. Some even guarantee a refund if the goal is not achieved. For students preparing for higher studies or job interviews or looking for social mobility, such claims are difficult to resist since English has become a global necessity and the pressure to acquire it quickly is immense. However, beneath these assurances, lies a more complex reality about how languages are actually learned.

In many centres, training is built around predictable conversational patterns. Learners are taught to introduce themselves, describe their hobbies and discuss their ambitions, and respond to routine questions. These are useful starting points but the method often relies heavily on memorisation. Students internalise fixed sentences and reproduce them with confidence, creating the impression of fluency in controlled environments.

Thinking in English
Yet, language is not a set of ready-made expressions to be recalled on demand. It is a system that must be actively constructed in the mind. The first step in communication occurs in thought, where ideas take shape before being articulated. When learners rely primarily on memorised phrases, they struggle in unfamiliar situations that require spontaneous expression.

The reliance on translation further complicates this process. In many classrooms, concepts are explained in the regional language and then translated into English. While this may make learning appear easier, it prevents learners from thinking directly in English. Instead, they become dependent on a mental translation process, which slows communication and restricts originality. True fluency emerges only when the language becomes a medium of thought rather than a tool of conversion.

A striking feature of some spoken English programmes is the neglect of essential components of language learning. Grammar, for instance, is often dismissed as unnecessary with the argument that spoken English requires only practice. While an excessive focus on rules can indeed hinder fluency, the absence of grammatical awareness leaves learners without the structural framework needed to form coherent and accurate sentences.

Pronunciation is another overlooked area. Few centres offer systematic training in phonetics, which is crucial to develop clarity and intelligibility. Without this guidance, learners rely on approximations influenced by their first language, leading to persistent errors that can affect academic and personal communication in academic and professional settings.

Equally important is vocabulary. Effective communication depends not merely on confidence but on the availability of words to express thought. Many students, including those educated in English-medium institutions, struggle with limited vocabulary. This restricts their ability to think and articulate ideas in English. Vocabulary building is a gradual process that requires sustained exposure to reading, listening, and meaningful interaction. It cannot be achieved through short-term courses alone.

Quality and regulation
The issue of trainer qualifications raises further concerns. In several centres, instructors are graduates, or even less, with minimal training in language pedagogy and limited professional experience. Teaching a language is not just about speaking it but requires an understanding of how learners acquire language, how errors can be addressed, and how communicative competence can be developed.

This situation bears an unsettling resemblance to the phenomenon of pseudo-medical practitioners who, without proper qualifications, work in clinics or set-up their own practice. Reports of such cases frequently appear in the news, raising serious questions about public safety and professional standards. While the consequences in language education may not be as immediately visible, the long-term impact on learners' confidence and competence can be significant.

It would, however, be unfair to dismiss all spoken English centres. For many learners, especially those who hesitate to speak, these spaces provide an initial platform to overcome fear and build confidence. The concern lies not in their existence but in the methods they employ and the expectations they create.

Given the increasing importance of English in education, employment, and everyday communication, there is a need to view language training as a serious and responsible enterprise. Regulatory oversight could help ensure that centres maintain basic standards. Fluency cannot be packaged, priced, and delivered within a fixed duration. It is cultivated over time, through consistent practice, meaningful exposure, and intellectual engagement.

"The Road to 2030: How Skill-Based Learning Can Transform India's Workforce"

Dr Vijay Garg

India stands at a defining moment in its economic journey. With one of the world's youngest populations, the country has the potential to transform its demographic advantage into a powerful engine of growth. Yet, this promise hinges on a critical factor—skills. Bridging the gap between classroom learning and real-world employment through vocational education may well determine whether India becomes a global talent powerhouse by 2030.

The Skill Gap Challenge
Despite progress in higher education, India continues to face a significant mismatch between education and employability. A large share of the workforce lacks formal training, with nearly 65% of people never receiving vocational or technical education. At the same time, industries report difficulty finding job-ready talent, highlighting a deep disconnect between academic knowledge and practical skills.

The scale of the challenge is immense. India is projected to need millions of skilled workers every year until 2030, while also facing a potential shortage of around 29 million skilled professionals. Without urgent action, this gap could slow economic growth and limit opportunities for millions of young people.

Vocational Education: The Missing Link

Vocational education offers a direct solution by focusing on hands-on, industry-relevant skills. Unlike traditional academic pathways, it prepares students for specific careers—from manufacturing and healthcare to digital technologies and green energy.

India has already taken steps in this direction through initiatives like the Skill India Mission and a vast network of Industrial Training Institutes (ITIs), which number nearly 15,000 across the country. These institutions play a crucial role in equipping youth with practical skills and improving employability.

Encouragingly, employability levels are rising, reaching over 56% in recent years. However, this progress must accelerate to meet future demands.

The Changing Nature of Work
The future workforce will require more than basic skills.

Rapid technological change is reshaping job roles across industries. By 2030, a majority of workers will need retraining or upskilling, while nearly 40% of current skills may become outdated.

Emerging sectors such as artificial intelligence, cybersecurity, and data analytics are already driving demand for new capabilities. Recent insights highlight that these digital skills are becoming essential for employability in India's evolving job market.

Vocational education must therefore move beyond traditional trades and embrace modern, technology-driven training.

Bridging the Classroom–Industry Divide

One of the biggest challenges in India's education system is the lack of alignment with industry needs. Vocational education can bridge this gap by fostering closer collaboration between schools, training institutes, and employers.

Key strategies include:
Industry partnerships: Companies can help design curricula and offer internships.

Apprenticeships: Real-world experience ensures students are job-ready.

Flexible learning pathways: Combining academic and vocational streams allows students to explore multiple career options.

Such integration ensures that learning is not just theoretical but directly linked to employment opportunities.

Empowering Youth and Inclusive Growth

Vocational education also plays a crucial role in social inclusion. It provides opportunities for students who may not pursue higher education, enabling them to secure stable livelihoods. Increasing participation of women in skill programs is another positive trend, contributing to a more inclusive workforce.

Moreover, as India expands its manufacturing and service sectors, skilled workers will be essential to drive productivity, innovation, and global competitiveness.

The Road to 2030
To fully harness vocational education, India must:

Expand access to quality training programs
Update curricula to match emerging technologies

Delhi CM Inaugurates 12th India Rubber Expo

New Delhi, 7/4 (H.S.): Delhi Chief Minister Rekha Gupta inaugurated the 12th India Rubber Expo at Bharat Mandapam on Tuesday, extending a warm welcome to representatives from various countries. The expo features participation from over 14 nations, including China, alongside leading international and Indian rubber industry players, organized by the All India Rubber Industries Association from April 7-10—as Asia's largest rubber sector event. In an X post, the Chief Minister credited Prime Minister Narendra Modi's visionary leadership for establishing India as a robust manufacturing powerhouse through 'Make in India' and 'Atmanirbhar Bharat' initiatives, positioning the rubber industry as a key pillar. She highlighted India's entry into the second phase of its civil nuclear program as a historic milestone reflecting scientific prowess, self-reliance, and growing global confidence. The Chief Minister

Government Doubles Supply Quota for 5-Kg LPG Cylinders, Easing Burden on Migrant Workers and Students

New Delhi, 7/4 (H.S.): Amid supply disruptions in cooking gas triggered by ongoing conflicts in West Asia, the Central government has announced a doubling of the quota for 5-kilogram Free Trade LPG (FTL) cylinders. This measure primarily benefits migrant workers and students who migrate from villages to cities for jobs or education and rely on these connection-free small cylinders for cooking. According to a notification from the Petroleum Ministry, the enhanced quota is calculated by doubling the average daily supply of these cylinders to open markets on March 2 and 3. These 5-kg FTL cylinders will be distributed exclusively to migrants through state food and civil supplies departments, requiring only a valid identity proof—no permanent address or gas connection needed. This accessibility proves especially vital for transient city dwellers like outstation laborers and students in rented accommodations. Since the West Asia conflict began, the government has intensified efforts to secure petroleum product availability, including petrol, diesel, and LPG. Officials have reiterated ample stocks at distributor points, with over 5.1

million domestic cylinders delivered on April 4 alone, and urged the public to avoid panic buying, shun rumors, and use digital booking platforms. Priority has also been assigned to domestic LPG, piped natural gas (PNG), hospitals, and educational institutions to prevent shortages in critical sectors.

Imphal, 7/4 (HS): At least two minor children were killed in a suspected rocket attack by Kuki militants in Manipur's Bishnupur district early Tuesday, triggering widespread tension and outrage in the region.

The incident took place around 2 am at Tronglaobi Awang Leikai under Moirang Police Station when a suspected projectile landed in a residential area and exploded. goods-laden truck heading towards Churachandpur, further aggravating the situation. Protesters also gheraoed Moirang Police Station, demanding immediate action against those responsible. Tyres and debris were burnt outside the police station as a mark of protest. Heavy security forces have been deployed in the area to control the situation. Officials stated that the situation remains tense but is under close monitoring. Chief Minister N. Biren Singh condemned the attack, calling it a "barbaric act," and assured that strict action would be taken against the perpetrators after identification. He asserted that such acts of violence would not be tolerated under any circumstances.

The Chief Minister also highlighted initiatives to strengthen education and healthcare infrastructure, including upgrading residential schools, expansion of primary health centres and development of advanced medical facilities in the region. In the irrigation sector, projects on the Indravati River are expected to expand irrigation coverage and strengthen agricultural productivity. A three-year livelihood plan has also been outlined with the objective of increasing household incomes and improving economic stability in the region. The Chief Minister said the Niyad Nellanar 2.0 initiative is being expanded to additional districts to ensure wider delivery of development benefits and government welfare schemes. To promote entrepreneurship, a startup policy has been introduced with a target of supporting 5,000 startups by 2030 to encourage innovation and employment generation. Tourism development plans include infrastructure improvement at major waterfalls and national parks in Bastar along with promotion of adventure tourism to attract more visitors. The Bastar Munne initiative will organise camps in gram panchayats to improve access to government services, facilitate delivery of welfare schemes and ensure grievance redressal at the local level. Government Extends TRP Suspension for News Channels Amid West Asia Crisis

New Delhi, 7/4 (H.S.): The Central government has extended the suspension of Television Rating Points (TRP) for TV news channels by another four weeks. This measure aims to curb speculation and sensationalism during the ongoing crisis. The Ministry of Information and Broadcasting directed the Broadcast Audience Research Council (BARC) to halt TRP reporting following the dissemination of inaccurate and fabricated news during the Israel-Iran conflict, preventing panic among the public. The ministry's order noted that certain news channels were broadcasting war scenarios in an unnecessarily sensational manner. Such content risks creating confusion and fear, particularly heightening anxiety among families of those in affected regions. During this period, channels' performance will not be evaluated through standard TRP processes. Notably, the government had initially ordered a four-week TRP suspension for news channels on March 6 in view of the West Asia crisis.

World Health Day is observed annually on April 7 to commemorate the founding of the World Health Organization in 1948. The day aims to raise global awareness about health issues and promote improved healthcare services worldwide.

Jindal Steel Leads India's Coal Gasification Revolution for Energy Self-Reliance & Sustainable Steel

New Delhi, 7/4(DMS): Jindal Steel has pioneered the use of swadeshi coal through advanced coal gasification, significantly strengthening India's energy security while enabling low-carbon steel production. The company achieved a global first by establishing India's first coal gasification-based Direct Reduced Iron (DRI) plant, using syngas for iron-making. In response to shortages of natural gas, LPG, and propane, Jindal Steel has now successfully deployed syngas in galvanising and colour coating line furnaces—marking the first such application in the steel industry. This has helped the company better mitigate fuel shortages in these unprecedented times.

Further strengthening its leadership, Jindal Steel has pioneered syngas injection into its blast furnace, reducing dependence on imported coking coal and lowering carbon emissions per tonne of steel. This integrated deployment of syngas across the steelmaking value chain sets a new benchmark for efficiency, sustainability, and energy self-reliance. The forward-looking policies and incentives of the Government of India—including the National Coal Gasification Mission, are expected to accelerate the adoption of coal gasification technologies and support the country's push towards energy self-reliance. Mr. P.K. Biju Nair, Executive Director Angul, Jindal Steel, said: "Synthesis gas from swadeshi coal can replace imported methanol, ammonia, ammonium nitrate, and LNG. India must utilise its vast coal reserves to future-proof low-carbon growth and reduce forex outflow. Coal gasification, coupled with CCUS, will lower emission intensity, support CBAM compliance, and strengthen our export competitive ness". By harnessing swadeshi coal and deploying advanced clean coal gasification technologies, Jindal Steel is advancing the vision of Aatmanirbhar Bharat while delivering sustainable and cost-competitive steel production.

Government Prepares 2.5 Lakh Crore Special Credit Guarantee Scheme to Aid Industries

New Delhi, 7/4 (H.S.): The ongoing conflict in West Asia continues to pressure India's economy, severely impacting manufacturing, supply, and service sectors. In response to this crisis, the Central government is poised to announce a major relief package soon. Authorities have finalized the draft for the Special Credit Guarantee Scheme, valued at ₹2.5 lakh crore. Expected to receive Cabinet approval shortly, this package draws inspiration from the 2020

Emergency Credit Line Guarantee Scheme (ECLGS) during the COVID-19 pandemic but features a significantly larger scope and budget. Experts indicate the scheme will provide financial assistance to all sectors affected by the war, particularly those grappling with disrupted supply chains and escalated costs. The initiative aims to alleviate liquidity crunches through targeted support. Under the package, the National Credit Guarantee Trustee Company (NCGTC) will offer a 90% credit guarantee on loans to companies. This means the government will cover 90% of banks' losses if borrowing firms default on repayments, enabling banks to lend confidently without additional collateral requirements. Like ECLGS, no extra security or guarantees will be needed from borrowers. The scheme proposes a four-year tenure, with up to one year moratorium on principal repayment while mandating regular interest payments. Unlike the MSME-focused ECLGS, this relief extends beyond micro, small, and medium enterprises to all war-impacted sectors. A substantial portion remains reserved for MSMEs to combat liquidity issues, alongside aid for firms facing raw material shortages and import-export hurdles.

Kolkata: Artists and technicians in Bengali film and television industry have decided to stop shooting of all serials and films for an indefinite period from April 7, protesting the death of actor Rahul Arunoday Banerjee and demanding security for the actors. This was announced after a meeting of the West Bengal Artist's Forum at Technicians Studio on Sunday. The actors in Tollywood film industry took to the streets on Saturday afternoon, to condemn the tragic death of Rahul Arunoday Banerjee on March 29 while shooting a Bengali serial in Talsari beach in Odisha. On Saturday, an FIR was filed at the Regent Park police station in Kolkata by the West Bengal Artist Forum against the production company, which was responsible for the shooting. On the same day, Rahul's wife and actress Priyanka Sarkar, went to the Talsari police station from Kolkata at midnight and filed an FIR. On Sunday evening, the artists once again came together to express solidarity with Rahul Arunoday Banerjee's family. Actors Prosenjit Chatterjee, Rituparna Sengupta, Shantilal Mukherjee, Anjana Basu, Jishu Sengupta, Rupanjana Mitra, Bidipta Chakraborty and many others were also present at the meeting on Sunday. On behalf of the Artist's Forum, Shantilal Mukherjee said on Sunday afternoon that the shooting is being stopped for an indefinite period. He added, "Yesterday, we filed an FIR at the Regent Park police station on behalf of the Artist's Forum. We were, are and will be with Rahul Arunoday Banerjee's family." He said the decision to stop shooting was taken by the 4,000 members of the forum, 7,000 technician members of the federation and all the crew. Shantilal Mukherjee said, "This fight has started for safety and to save the lives of all of us. We are insecure. We are going out for shooting. But I don't know if I will be able to return or not. Rahul Arunoday Banerjee has taught us. So we will observe a strike from Tuesday morning." On behalf of the federation, Swarup Biswas said, "We didn't want it. But no one is coming forward to take responsibility. For the purpose of shooting, the artists and crew have to do a lot. Sometimes they have to go to the river, sometimes the sea, sometimes the mountains. No one has ever backed down. Everyone risks their lives and moves forward. Everyone tries to do their best. We all want to save this industry. Lakhs of people work in this industry." Bengali superstar Prosenjit Chatterjee also said in the same tone on Sunday. "Artists, crew and everyone need protection during their work. Security should be mandatory for everyone. Because everyone is very scared about this incident," he added. From now onwards, there is a demand that an ambulance should be kept at every shoot. Taking lessons from Rahul Arunoday Banerjee's incident, the actors and crew have made such demands. Therefore, in addition to demanding justice for the late actor's death, they have also demanded their own safety. Actress Rituparna Sengupta said, "Rahul Arunoday Banerjee left us. We will fight till the end. The way he left is not desirable. He left us all together. His death raised the question,

"Are we safe at all?" The entire industry has come together and decided to go on a strike." Members of the Artist's Forum and Federation will be present at the Technicians Studio at 10 a.m. on Tuesday to observe the strike. Director Kaushik Gangopadhyay said, "I will ask all the producers, directors, artists and crew to come this morning. Accidents happen suddenly. They cannot be predicted in advance. However, there should be some rules so that the dignity of the artist and his family remain intact." It is to be noted that all movie and tv serial shootings will be stopped from Tuesday. On March 29, the 42-year-old actor Rahul Arunoday Banerjee was shooting for the television series 'Bhole Baba Paar Karega'. The late actor entered the water at Talsari, just as the tide came in he was swept away. However, technicians subsequently pulled him out of the water. Preliminary reports indicate that Rahul Arunoday Banerjee's death was caused by drowning following which a case of unnatural death has been registered at the Digha Police Station. The tragic incident has brought the entire Bengali film and television industry to a standstill. Fellow actors, directors and technicians have expressed shock at the tragic death of the actor. The late actor is survived by his mother, his wife and actor Priyanka Sarkar, and 13-year-old son.
